The Emperor's New Clothes

Adapted by Timothy Mason, story by Hans Christian Andersen

Produced by special arrangement with Plays for New Audiences.

When the Emperor refuses to wear any article of clothing twice, the townsfolk spend every day making new clothes. But everything grinds to a halt when two charming strangers arrive in town. They claim that they can create the latest thing in fashion; invisible clothes which can only be seen by those who are wise. How will the Empire's leaders handle the arrival of these strangers... of these clothes.... of this test...? Join us for this fun, family-friendly take on the classic tale by Hans Christian Andersen.

Content warning: Depictions of emotional manipulation, threats of decapitation, simulated nudity, public embarrassment, grifting, medieval punishment.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead

by Tom Stoppard

Presented by arrangement with Concord Theatricals on behalf of Samuel French, Inc.
www.concordtheatricals.com

Rosencrantz & Guildenstern are Dead is a fantastically witty, tragicomic exploration of Shakespeare's Hamlet from the perspective of Hamlet's childhood friends: a pair of characters who exist only to deliver a letter, and then lose their heads. Audiences of all ages will enjoy the twists and turns of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern's journey to discover the cause of Hamlet's madness and their own purpose in the world.

Content warning: Depictions of armed conflict in the form of sword fighting; discussions of suicide, murder, death; mentions of sexual assault and prostitution.

A MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTORS

Tyler McClaron

Tyler McClaron

Director The Emperor's New Clothes

"We are limited not by our abilities, but by our vision." - Khalil Gibran

Each day we must decipher truth from deceit. Preferably, we will each cultivate this skill within ourselves; but at times, we may need to defer to the authority of others to fully discern reality from make-believe. Hopefully, all parties can be honest with each other about their respective abilities to see and understand, for the benefit of the Empire. If we are not able, or willing, to inspect a situation for ourselves, the authority to which we defer must be trustworthy and steadfast in our common pursuit of truth. In this play, as in our lives, truth is all around us; waiting to be uncovered and seen by all who wish to be wise. Gaze at life's magical cloth, and speak your truth.

Director Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead (RAGAD) is my favourite play and I'm honoured that I get to share it here for CSTF. The wordplay, the Shakespeare, and the strangely hopeful message of this tragicomedy have intrigued me for years, and I fell in love with Canmore's community theatre when I worked on costumes for Minotaur last year. Bringing the two together has been a delight.

RAGAD is Shakespeare's Hamlet from the perspective of two minor characters. There are wheels within wheels moving the tragic story around them, and so they do their best. There is hope in that, especially today when so much seems so beyond our control. Fortunately, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern have each other to lean on, and that too gives me hope. We are small, but we have each other. For comfort, assistance, an ear to listen, a shoulder to cry on, or just a partner for a rousing game of Questions.
